

CRACOW CAPTURED BY RUSSIANS, IS REPORT

LONDON, Nov. 14.—According to a news agency dispatch from Rome the Russian Embassy there has received a message stating that Cracow has been captured. This news is not confirmed from any other source.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—It has been fully confirmed that the British dreadnaught Audacious, one of the newest and most powerful ships of the English navy, has been sunk off the coast of Ireland, presumably by a mine. Though the English censor has prevented any news of this disaster being cabled, the AMERICAN received information concerning it by mail and today it received a photograph sent by its London bureau that showed the Audacious half submerged.

The photograph also shows the port deck of the dreadnaught crowded with sailors, while about her were several small boats pulled in the water to aid in the rescue work.

The picture of the stricken dreadnaught shows her listing to starboard, with the water aimed at her forward deck and her stern high in the air. The vessel apparently had a hole torn in her starboard side.

In transmitting by mail the news of the sinking of the Audacious to the admiralty of the London bureau of the AMERICAN

NEW YORK, Nov. 14—A lighted bank was discovered last night under the Tammany roof, just under the offices of Governor-elect Whitman.

The bank contained explosive enough to have wrecked the building. It was spotted in construction

The one which shattered Rem's Courtroom last Wednesday night.

It contained gaspolder, staps and bullets. When fired its half-inch fire was fatal and mostly turned down to the point of explosion.

The bomb was found under a seat in the courtroom. It exploded because of Mr.istrate Campbell's open coat. Lieutenant George L. Lester discovered it, ran to the post, picked up the bomb and threw it away and carried the infernal contrivance out and put it in water.

Poor Mrs. Brown sat all day on a bench in the rear of the courtroom at the time of the discovery.

The policeman who discovered the infernal machine had once in court with a prisoner when he happened to notice smoke ascending in a slight breeze from under his feet. He front of the room. He stepped forward and saw that the bomb was about the size of two tennis rackets, which a flame was burning and lighting. The officer extinguished the flame, and as he did so a small amount of water could be perceived the bomb was found to be a small amount of water.

The Bureau of Combustion was summoned from fire headquarters. The bomb was wrapped in a newspaper, and the fuse protruded about half an inch from one end, and a small portion of the end had been burned.

At this point, the bomb was found to be a small amount of water.

THE "BOY BROKER" SUES FOR A DIVORCE

Robert E. Davis, the "boy broker," who was married in the middle of his five-year sentence for larceny and embezzlement, has brought suit for divorce and the papers were filed today in the Suffolk court, his charges desertion.

Mr. Davis's wife, whom he won at the time he was coming as a devoted churchman and cultured gentleman, inducing his friends to entrust their funds to him for investment, is the daughter of James E. Cotter, the attorney. Shortly after her marriage to Davis, they were separated, since then she has served as a nurse in the City Hospital.

Davis's attorney is Winfield C. Towne of No. 4 Beacon street, who looked after his interests up to the time Davis secured a pardon.

Davis's "larceny by embezzlement" from the friends who had entrusted their money to him was placed as high as $50,000. At the height of his career, after his wife and he had separated, he led a Wall Street life to believe he was making money, when in fact he was losing it.

When sentenced to five years in the State Prison, Davis was brought back from Rio de Janeiro. In route, he eluded a sentence in his own name and made a little money. Here he was sentenced to five years in the House of Correction.

While there he tried to open up an account on the market. Later he began to fail in health. His wife, who was a nurse, visited him in the hospital. He was successful, for in December, 1913, he was pardoned. He went up to see his wife, Governor Fox, and said to the reporters then:

"The going is ahead life afresh in another city. The past is dead. Please don't resurrect it. I'm doing a new life, new duties, and I shall concentrate my life on my mother."

His divorce suit brings him again in the public eye.

ANNUAL AUTUMN SALE

Monday, November 16. This is one of our three great Catalogue Sales. Because of the peculiar merchandise conditions this year, the sale is of much more value to you than ever before. In addition to the merchandise conditions, which are well understood, you will remember that the month of October was hot from beginning to end—the most discouraging thing that can come to the dry goods business. For this reason, although many kinds of goods are scarce, many importers and American manufacturers, realizing that the natural season was slipping by, made contracts with us at very large reductions from the usual prices on large amounts of their best materials. In fact many of the suits, coats and dresses in this sale have actually been made up since we made these contracts and therefore are in the latest and most approved styles.

It will be well worth your while to read your catalogue through carefully from the first page to the last, because there are a great many items and every one of them describes just such goods as our regular customers like and on every one of them there is a large saving in price.

DRIVE GERMANS OUT OF DIXMUDE

For almost a week Fleet street has known that H. M. S. Audacious had been in collision with a mine off the north coast of Ireland. Later the news was spread about that the survivors from the dreadnaught had been picked up by the White Star liner Olympic. The Olympic meantime was reported to have put in at Lough Swilly on the northeast coast of Ireland.

Although application was repeatedly made to the censor for confirmation or denial of these reports, none was forthcoming. On the contrary the censor prohibited any mention being made of the disaster.

The first of the Olympic's passengers arrived in London at 6 o'clock this morning. Announcement had been made yesterday that the passengers would arrive at Euston Station on a special train at 12:40 today.

There is no train regularly, and when the newspaper men went to Euston at the appointed hour they learned that the Olympic's passengers had arrived over various roads at various stations in the early hours of this morning.

ORDERED TO KEEP SILENT.

Two of the Olympic's passengers were located by the Boston AMERICAN'S London correspondent at the Savoy Hotel this afternoon. One of them denied he had been on the Olympic, and the other refused to talk. It is evident the British government issued instructions before the passengers were allowed to leave the Olympic at Belfast to keep secret what they may know of the disaster.

Charles M. Schwab, the steel man, the only passenger to be allowed to leave the Olympic at Lough Swilly, admitted today that he had obtained this permission only on the condition that he keep silence.

One report of the affair was that the Audacious sighted and sank a Swedish steamer laying mines off the north coast of Ireland. The Audacious is said then to have wirelessed the Olympic of the danger, only a moment later herself emphasizing it by coming in contact with one of the mines. The explosion is said to have caused her boilers to burst, scalding 147 men, three of them fatally. It is said the Olympic came up in time to tow the Audacious into a small harbor on the Irish coast, where she sank in 24 feet of water.

GERMANS WIN AND LOSE.

Germany's desperate onslaught to break through the lines of the allies and push on to the English Channel continued today with varying successes and reverses.

It is officially reported from Berlin that the Germans have captured St. Ploy, south of Ypres and that they have succeeded in crossing the Yser canal west of Laugesmarek.

The official French report says that the Germans have been repulsed in an attack upon the bridge at Nieuport at well as east and southeast of Ypres. The allies have gained ground in the environs of Bixschote. It is reported unofficially that the Germans have been driven out of Dixmude.

Reports received from Paris today by mail to escape the censor, say that the French army totals 600,000, not 300,000 men, one half of which have not yet been under fire. This great reserve force, all under thirty years of age, fully trained and adequately equipped for battle, is ready to march at a moment's notice.

The statement that the Germans have lost Dixmude comes from a Central News correspondent, who cables from northern France.

"The Germans had not long in which to congratulate themselves on their seizure of the mass of ruins which once was the ill-starred town of Dixmude. They were sprayed with shrapnel and shattered with high explosive shells until extermination threatened them. The appearance of French marines with bayonets at charge rapidly put an end to the death rate which would be too high if they remained. Hence, Dixmude is ours again."

"The Germans have made a slight advance against Ypres, but it is doubtful if they hold the village of Steilou."

"At La Bassée the Germans are attempting to drive a wedge into the allied line by a concentrated heavy gun fire. There has been a considerable bulge in the line here for some time, but the Allies hold their positions on either flank."

CANADIANS UNDER FIRE.

Canada's first contingent, it was learned in Paris today, had its baptism of fire in the fighting along the Yser. The troops were transported secretly from England to reinforce the hard-pressed British army and have undoubtedly sustained heavy losses.

That they covered themselves with glory is indicated by the announcement that the attacks of the allies are growing in an organized offensive, the desperate attempts of the Germans, by continuous attacks by the Prussian Guards and incessant bombardment, to wear them out, having failed.

"WOMAN IN WHITE" APPEARS TO WARN KAISER OF DANGER

Berlin Affair with Story Based on Old Tradition of Hohenzollern House.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 14.—The "woman in white," the spectral figure that warns the Hohenzollerns of danger to come, has reappeared at Potsdam Palace, according to a Berlin report. The German court is again with the story.

According to legend the "woman in white" always appears at Potsdam Palace when the head of the Hohenzollern family is assailed by death or disaster. The story has been chronicled in later years in the authentic and military circles, but the mass of common people, especially the country folk, have refused to forget this old Prussian superstition.

With the public mind at fever heat, as it is now, it needed only a bare mention of the story to send it flying through the capital and environs. The rumor by saying that the "woman in white" is a warning woman who appears to the king and his family.

MISTAKE THIS TIME.
News comes filtering through from the German lines of the startling change in the Kaiser's appearance, due to his clipping the appendage of his mustache. The first mention of this was when the Kaiser, through central Germany a few days ago, was his way to inspect the number of recruits, who were being put into shape by the training officers.

The loss of the appendage ends gives the imperial mustache a downward curve, and the result is naturally severe, even deplorable. It is not regarded as any personal improvement, though none would dare to say so openly.

The Kaiser has established personal headquarters at Coblenz. He has invited his family, his wife and his sons, including the crown prince, to visit him. The imperial quarters are guarded on every side by cavalry. The Kaiser's private quarters, which are constantly guarded by his Majesty's private quarters.

FIRE FIRST SHOT.
The Kaiser's constant movement from one point to another on the front is now accounted for by the German tradition that the chief war hero will fire the first shot from each of the new heavy guns. Whenever a new seventeen-inch howitzer is mounted, the Kaiser proceeds to the spot and fires the first shot by touching a button from a position some distance behind the line.

WHEN YOU'RE MOST LIABLE TO BE HURT OR KILLED.

It has lately been found out that a very close relation exists between a person's degree of fatigue and accidents, and this is no new discovery. Accidents and deaths occur just before the whistle blows.

WAR MIXES TRAGEDY AND GRIM COMEDY

Berlin reports that twenty-five new Zepplins will be ready by the middle of November.

Information has reached this country that the Japanese are transporting quantities of heavy artillery, in charges of Japanese officers, over the Trans-Siberian Railway, destined for Poland. Considerable secrecy is being observed. At least two or three long trains of Japanese guns have come to the front.

One of the German prisoners of war in England has written home that had treatment, had food and cold barracks resulted in the death of forty-six Germans out of 700 within one week. All of them died of typhoid fever and pneumonia. There were no wounded men among the prisoners.

The French rival the Germans in the art of trench making. An officer writes that his men have not only dug up a cooling store in the trenches, but have also half a dozen bathtubs filled with hot and cold water. Next to the bathtubs is a shaving salon where the men take turns shaving on another.

"Major, I am going back to the rear; this is no fun. These Germans don't look where they are shooting."

With the remark credited to Sergeant Bonet, of the Ninth Belgian Infantry, as he stagen smilingly into a trench with a German bullet through his breast and fell dead at his commander's feet.

Says a French writer of the Belgian soldier: "The Belgian soldier is small; he is not exceptionally equipped; he makes a sorry appearance and in peace times is a grumbler. But, under fire, he is superbly calm and composed. He laughs and plays amid the fiercest fighting. They know how to die. Duty is paramount and they die like the Commandants de Witt and Piraux, of Forts Warhem and Kessel, who, calmly smoking their pipes, blew themselves and their positions into nothingness when they could resist no longer."

Writes a Frenchman from the battle line near Chant: "Last Sunday shells ravaged our tired ranks. Suddenly a caisson climbed an artilleryman, dirty and unkempt. He was a priest, and there that caisson he celebrated holy mass, a step away from cannon that were being fired every moment. The shock jarred the caisson until it shivered."

Crown Prince Eats Turnip With Troops

BERLIN, Nov. 14.—The Cologne Gazette prints this story from a wounded soldier:

"As we passed a turnip field we soldiers took advantage of the opportunity and filled up on turnips. The Crown Prince, at first laughing, then called to us: 'When in need, the devil will eat flesh.' Hand me one of those turnips."

"I just then had a nice fat one in my coat, which I had cleaned, and gave nearest to the Prince, handing it to him. He heartily bit into it and remarked: 'Not so bad after all!'"

Boston Business Men Must Wake Up, or Other Cities Will Make the Most Out of the Present Unparalleled Opportunity

Do the business men of Boston realize what efforts other cities are making to take advantage of this unparalleled situation, in which every important nation, except our own, is at war?

Mr. John H. Fahey, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and a citizen of our metropolis, says that Boston business men apparently DO NOT REALIZE the preparations of other communities for entering the vast fields of commerce and industry which have been abandoned by the rest of the world for war.

Mr. Fahey has just finished a tour of the country with his associate directors of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Fahey says:

"It's time New England men woke up to the situation. See what they are doing in other sections of the country. In Pittsburgh they have raised a fund of $1,000,000 to be used as a general development fund to promote Pittsburgh's business."

"In Chicago the Association of Commerce is maintaining a banking branch for South America, and only recently appropriated several hundred thousand dollars to take care of its expenses in that respect for three years."

"There is now being organized a special banking house to represent Illinois and the Mississippi Valley in Central and South America."

"A great convention of Illinois and Mississippi Valley men will be held in Memphis on November 19 and 20 to take steps for the further development of the business of those great sections. The movement is led by Chicago and New Orleans."

"San Francisco and the Northwest had plans made before the war broke out to establish business plants on a great scale for the promotion of trade in the Far East. The war hasn't stopped them. They are going ahead."

"The fact of the matter is that the people of Boston and of New England have but little idea, but small conception, of what the business men of Pittsburgh, Chicago, New Orleans, Chattanooga, Knoxville, San Francisco and St. Louis are doing today in the way of getting orders and booming business."

"Chattanooga, for example, a comparatively small city, of which our business men know too little, has now an export trade of $30,000,000."

"There is a lot of talk about South America. But getting in there is going to be a very slow and very careful process."

"Look at the immense field there is now in Spain, in Russia, in France. All those countries have been trading largely with Germany. But the war has stopped those relations, and there is a tremendous sentimental aversion against German goods. It will take years to eradicate that feeling, even if the war ended tomorrow."

"Again, it will take years to rebuild the plants that are now being ruined and destroyed all over commercial Europe. We have the plants; we have the business organizations. We should be ready to take hold of the situation that is right now at our doors."

What is our Boston Chamber of Commerce doing? What are our shoe manufacturers, our cotton and woolen factories, those who might make and export dyes, doing? What are our New England railroads and our shipping interests doing to get for New England at least ITS SHARE of this great business?

During the Napoleonic wars, when all Europe was in conflict and only America remained at peace, New England obtained the WHOLE of the world's carrying trade and America kept a large part of it for nearly half a century after peace was declared. Why can we not get some of that great commerce back now?

A tidewater city has an infinite advantage over cities which must depend entirely upon the railroad for the transportation of its goods. At the tidewater we have both the rail and the water. We can select which is the best and the cheapest.

THE OPPORTUNITY IS HERE. It is all a matter of courage and enterprise.

Consider Heligoland and Our Own Position in the Pacific

When, in a moment of folly, now bitterly repented, England surrendered Heligoland to Germany, in exchange for shadowy German claims to a protectorate in Zanzibar, the military and naval authorities of the time protested vigorously. Lord Salisbury was Premier. Like many politicians otherwise astute, he was intolerant of the views of "professional soldiers." "If they had their way," said he sapiently, "they would make us fortify the moon to head off a possible attack from Mars."

So Heligoland was given up by England, and made an impenetrable naval base by Germany. From its well defended harbors rally forth the submarines that are making of every British warship a station in the North Sea a post of danger.

The United States has its Heligoland, farther away, it is true, than the island in the North Sea is from the British coast, but bearing to our Pacific shores much the same strategic position.

The Japanese have not been blind to the advantage of this outpost of the United States in the Asiatic waters. They have seized upon the present war in Europe to take for themselves Tsing-Tau, a long step toward Manila. Should we, as unwise politicians urge, abandon the Philippines, the Japanese would at once take them over. That would be their second step.

With Manila once in their possession, operations against Honolulu would be simple, and the final step for Japanese control of the Pacific would not wait long.

The Japanese are proceeding intelligently and patriotically, from their point of view, to put themselves in a position where they can strike quickly and powerfully against any nation whose rivalry may interfere with their purposes.

The nation most menaced is our own. In the meanwhile, our government, through indifference and neglect, is becoming more and more unprepared for a conflict which is almost inevitable.

How Helen Helped

Chapter XIII.—The Forger's Confession

TWO days after Helen had planned to make young Van Buren confess about the forged check, she was busy at work on her typewriter when Paul came in. Frank saw Van Buren walk over to Helen and talk with her for some time. Finally Frank saw Helen give him a meaning look and a nod of the head. At this, Frank went to Paul's father's office and said: "Mr. Van Buren, if you will come with me a moment I think you will find out who forged my name to that check for $1,500. Now please try and take it calmly, for probably what you are about to hear may be somewhat of a shock to you."

As they listened they could hear Helen and Paul talking louder and louder. Finally Helen said, "Yes, Paul, if you want me to go away with you, as you suggest, you must first return the $1,500 you stole from your father by forging Frank Doming's name to that check and you must also tell your father that Frank was in no way concerned in the transaction."

On hearing this, the old man was for bursting through the door and confronting his son, but Frank whispered, "Wait! Then they heard Paul say to Helen, 'Yes, I did forge that check, but it was only to get even with that fellow Doming. I had been gambling heavily and at the time needed the money badly, but that's all gone by now. Helen, forgive me, I will see father and tell him the truth.'"

At this, Frank could restrain no longer. "So you are my son," said the old man. "You, the son whom I counted on to take care of the business when I was gone. You, you, but I guess it's my fault after all in giving you money you had not earned, to squander on things that only an idiot knows of. Frank, help me back to my office."—If C.

Men Gossips as Numerous as Women

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

WOMAN has been accused of gossiping, because she lacked occupation. Man, with his manifold duties, is supposed to be too busy for gossip. But men gossips are quite as numerous as those of the fairer sex.

In men's clubs, many a scandal is set rolling, which gains momentum as it proceeds upon its way, and wrecks many a home and ruins many a life.

Pushing women risk their reputations by allowing men to compromise them, and believe implicitly that their husbands will protect their names against the whole world.

Yet over a "stag dinner," or over a club table, the stories of these indiscretions are freely told. The names are gossiped or probably withheld; but it is a simple matter for the listeners to locate the character in the story of the play as related by the proud Lothario.

Under the influence of wine and "good fellowship," men who have been trusted and believed in by weak women have more than once shown letters and boasted of their conquests.

Woman has been accused of being jealous in her treatment of her own sex.

The arrival of a new woman in her circle is supposed to awaken her to a sense of rivalry, which leads her to do petty acts.

But it was a young man who carried off the palm for petty actions at one of the Summer resorts.

Because an attractive young woman came to the place without bringing a detailed account of her past life, the young man set himself the noble task of studying the directory of the town from which she came, and investigating the history of all families bearing her name.

Each day he made a new report upon the possible identity of the young woman.

His listeners were amused; but no one was frank enough to tell him how despicable he seemed in all eyes.

Meanwhile the very worthy and tired young woman, who had left an excellent position among the world's educators, and who came away for rest and recreation, and close to avoid any thought of her duties while resting, was all unconscious of this espionage. Liked and respected by her own sex, she was not prepared to find a would-be spy and gossip among men.

It is a mistaken belief of most women that men are their best and most liberal-minded friends.

Men demand more of women in the way of conventional behavior than other women demand.

Men are much more critical than women.

A man will not hesitate to be seen in public with a woman whose name rests under a shadow; but he will be very firm in forbidding his wife or sister or mother to be seen with her.

That is not friendship or defence.

A woman has been known to declare her belief in the innocence of one who was the subject of gossip, and at the same time to announce her intention to stand by her. And she has been prevented by the men of her family. Yet these same men were ready to give her money you had not earned, to squander on things that only an idiot knows of. Frank, help me back to my office."—If C.

Men believe themselves to be more liberal and just in their estimate of women than our sex; but they are not. They decide themselves.

Women are growing more liberal minded, more just and more sympathetic with each decade. They are growing less prone to gossip. But men are keeping up the average.

When next you hear a bit of gossip, look up its source. Ten to one you will find it started with a man.

Science urges us to give up eating white bread for the reason that to make it white three-fourths of the valuable mineral substances which wheat contains and which our bodies need, have to be discarded.

WHEN YOU'RE MOST LIABLE TO BE HURT OR KILLED.

It has lately been found out that a very close relation exists between a person's degree of fatigue and accidents, and this is why most injuries and accidental deaths occur just before the whistle blows.

And these are only a few of the striking stories prepared for your entertainment in tomorrow's Boston Sunday American.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

The first duel on Boston Common was fought in 1727 between Benjamin Woodbridge and Henry Phillips, young men of excellent families? Woodbridge fell and his grave is now in the Granary Burying Ground, close to the sidewalk fence.

Consider Heligoland and Our Own Position in the Pacific

have often asked each other how it was that England found herself unprepared for war, in the face of the continual warnings of a probable conflict with Germany.

Our people had better ask each other how it is that the United States will find itself unprepared for war in spite of the warnings which have been uttered and reiterated, and which have been so constantly uttered for many years.

This newspaper sincerely hopes that the Democratic administration will arouse to the necessities of this situation, and proceed to build the adequate navy which it pledged itself in its platform to build. If it does not do so, the Democratic party must realize that patriotic American citizens will consider the interests of the nation of more importance than any mere personal or party loyalty.
